

For my final project, I made a website that details the first semester as my last year as a college student. I broke down each section by the months and wrote short journal entries and captions for each page. My website uses a react router dom that allows it to have multiple pages. The website opens to a homepage that explains a little bit about the site and has buttons to take it to other pages. The one extra I used was react library.